

Mike Rann wants to kick it out from under you.

Nobody asks to be injured at work.

If you're hurt at work, how would you pay the mortgage, the bills and look after the kids?

In a crisis Workcover is there to support your family. But right now, Mr Rann is planning to slash your safety net and save business money instead. So you will have to struggle on less while companies get a bonus. And this is a Labor Government?

Mike Rann's law will mean:

- Injured workers will have to live on 90% of their wage after only 13 weeks and then 80% of their wage after 26 weeks.
- Most workers will be kicked off the scheme after two and half years, including those who are currently on Workcover payments.
- Injured workers will have their pay suspended if they dispute a decision about their claim.
- The amount injured workers receive for loss of a body part or body function will be less and always at the discretion of the Workcover Board. For small injuries such as losing the tip of a finger or a permanent facial scar, workers will get no compensation.
- No right to sue your employer for damages as exists in every other state in the country.
